

The E-Con

Brought to you by

Computer Connections Inc.

E-cons are looking to gain access to your personal information. What's an E-con you ask? That's a con man that looks to part you from your personal information and most importantly your hard earned money electronically.

Recently on our Facebook page we posted this question:

If a random stranger (whom you DID NOT contact) showed up at your door and said they were there to fix your TV, Stove, Refrigerator, Washing Machine, etc. would you let them come into your home?

100% of people who responded told us - No, I value my safety and the safety of my family.

Think about the valuable information that is stored on your computer. Your credit card information you use to make Internet purchases, your social security information you used to prepare your taxes, pictures of your children, grandchildren and other family members, your resume you use to apply for jobs, your stock and banking information, personal emails. The abundance information that is stored on your computer is staggering. Your computer is like the safe deposit box of your life.

So now, let us ask you this question:

If a random stranger (whom you DID NOT contact) called you on the phone and said they were calling to fix viruses and other threats on your computer all you have to do is click this link via email or website to give them access to your computer, would you click the link?

Hopefully, you answered NO!

Computer Connections is here to educate our community! We feel it's our professional responsibility to inform you that no legitimate person, whether it's Microsoft or anyone else will call you out of the blue and ask you for access to your computer so they can "fix" the problems of viruses and other threats. EVER!

If you do receive a call from a person requesting access to your computer hang up. If for any reason you feel your computer has been compromised contact a local professional like Computer Connections. A place you can walk into if you want or need to see who you're dealing with.

Here at Computer Connections we care about our customers and we care about our community. We care about your safety and your privacy! We care because we've seen a growing problem in the last few months of customers who have fallen victim of these types of calls, spending hundreds of dollars each. DON'T BE A VICTIM!
